

June 28, 1973

Dear Dave:

As you and I have discussed, there is no task in American foreign policy today more vital than reinvigorating the relations between the U.S., Western Europe, Canada and Japan. The interrelationship of our defense, trade, monetary and energy policies is a compelling fact. Harmonizing these policies is a challenging necessity.

Your conference should make a major contribution to the policy analyses now underway. I am looking forward to reading the conference proceedings.

I regret in special measure that my duties in California have prevented me from participating. Please convey my best wishes to the conference participants.

Warm regards,

Henry A. Kissinger

The Honorable David M. Abshire
Center for Strategic and International Studies
Georgetown University
Washington, D. C. 20006